Harnessing community power: how can local authorities support decentralized energy projects?

Time: 16:30 – 17:30 Venue: Agora Hall, Cities & Regions Pavilion – TAP2015
Date: 10/12/2015 Climate Generations Areas, COP21
Paris–Le Bourget

This session will focus on the role of local and regional authorities in supporting local renewables and especially community-led projects. The event will focus on challenges and barriers, as well as share success stories in the ongoing transition to renewably sourced energy at the local level. It is organized by ICLEI Europe, the Committee of the Regions, the European Economic and Social Committee in co-operation with the CO-POWER project, funded by Intelligent Energy Europe.

A panel discussion will explore and highlight the potential benefits of community energy in relation to energy security, social equity and energy democratization. The event will discuss how to speed up the development of renewable energy projects by creating a favorable legislative environment and policy frameworks at local, national and European level, as well as explore how decentralized energy can spur low carbon development in emerging economies.
